The Substitute.

[CONCLUDED.]

But when I had taken a brisk walk to quiet my nerves, and was coming slowly homeward, listening to the harsh creak of the bullfrogs and the cry of the night-birds that were flapping among the brakes and patches of woodland, I began to marvel at the scene I had witnessed.

After all, there were wide meshes in the net of that cruel law of conscription to which Reuben had fallen prey. The drafted man might escape as being unfit for service. One-half inch below the standard, a curved spine, a narrow chest, would warrant the medical inspector in refusing the recruit.

But no—Reuben was tall and shapely—not muscular, but quite able to march and fight. Again, he could buy his freedom for three hundred dollars. A moderate price after all, and one that could be furnished by many conscripts of the middle, and some even of the working class; and yet, if young Dart had the where-withal to purchase the exemption, why should there have been so many tears and so much distress?

On my return to the boarding-house I found matters going on quietly, but in a vein of settled sadness. Grace was not to be seen. She had a headache, and had gone early to rest. Mrs. Dart and her son had left. Mrs. Pogran was the only person visible, save the farmers and master mariners, who had returned to their pipes of negrohead and their local newspapers; and Mrs. Pogran was more incoherent and mystic in her discourse than I had ever known her to be.

Supper, under these circumstances, was but a melancholy meal, and I went to bed in unusually low spirits, and had strange dreams of trouble and perplexity, in which Grace and Reuben were peculiarly active.

Morning came, and I descended in due course to take my share in the mush and milk, coffee, the slapsacks, hot bread, pies, clams, whitefish, pumpkins, and stewed oysters of an American breakfast.

But still no Grace was to be seen.

I packed my slender luggage, I wished a civil farewell to the other boarders under Mrs. Pogran's roof, and got one of the helps to call a porter to carry my traps. Then I went to the little bar to bid adieu to my worthy hostess, and to thank her for the care of me when I lay sick and powerless, so far from my kindred. Mrs. Pogran, to my surprise, took my thanks and parting words with the worst possible grace.

She really seemed ashamed, somehow, of her past kindness; and my gratitude—clumsily expressed, I dare say, by my awkward English tongue—seemed to make her uncomfortable. She had done no more, she said, than she would do for any sick and distressed person.

Where was her daughter? Grace was out on business. Perhaps I should meet her. She knew Annie would like to shake hands before I went.

That was all—and it was said in a grating, dry tone, as if I had unwittingly given offense, and Mrs. Pogran looked as her ledger, at my waistcoat, out of the window—anywhere but in my face, as she uttered the words of her cold "good-bye."

It was with a heavy heart that I trudged beside the Irishman who carried my baggage, and I could not explain to my satisfaction the change that had come over my late entertainers. Motherly Mrs. Pogran so chilly and unfriendly, Grace absent, and the whole household upset by the occurrence of the previous evening; what sort of lesson ought I to draw from that?

But scarcely had I reached the coach office before a light foot-fall resounded on the pavement, a little hand was laid timidly upon my arm, and a sweet girlish face looked up toward mine, while a soft, sweet voice exclaimed reproachfully:

"Captain Martin, I never thought it of you! Leaving the town—leaving our house in such a hurry that you haven't time to bid farewell to your old friends—and quite forgetting poor little me!"

Never had I seen Grace look half so pretty. The rapidity of her course through the streets had given her rounded cheek the glow and flush of rosy bloom that English maidens so often, and American maidens so rarely, possess; and as she stood before me, breathless from her unwonted exertions, with her shining hair, her neat and tasteful attire, and real tears glistening in her bright eyes, I felt a sharp pang at the thought of losing her.

She took my offered arm, and we walked for a few minutes to and fro beneath the wayside elms, while the negro helpers were harnessing the team.

Grace was wonderfully captivating that morning; yet with all the seeming caprice and genuine tact in which women excel the best of us, she contrived to check the warm declaration of attachment which rose to my lips, and monopolized nearly all the conversation.

She, Grace Pogran, had learned to like me so well, and to esteem me so much, that she should always be truly glad to hear of my success in life—ay, glad as if I were her brother. She would not listen to my broken protests that my feelings toward herself were not fraternal by any means, but hurriedly went on to talk of the conscription and Reuben Dart.

Reuben, she said, was a neighbor's child, an old playmate of hers, a worthy young man, for whom her mother had a regard, and the Pograns were shocked that such a misfortune as being drawn for the army should have befallen him.

Reuben, she said, was the best of sons, the support of the family, since old Dart was paralytic, and Mrs. Dart had but a poor little shop that brought in scanty profit. There were besides heavy doctor's bills for the bedridden old man; there was a blind sister in the asylum, whose clothing had to be paid for out of Reuben's earnings. The young man had good wages, but he had never been able to save—never. His being drawn for a soldier was ruin. The Pograns pitied the Darts sincerely.

Well, pity is said to be akin to love, but I gradually felt the welcome assurance stealing upon my heart that Grace was not in love with the handsome young foreman.

Her voice when she spoke of him was so kind, yet so frank and steady, her compassion for "poor Reuben" so open and honest, that I soon perceived the truth. Grace was sorry for her mother's friend, about to be left of her only son; sorry for her old playfellow, in danger of death and mutilation, and whose liberty was forfeited, since he could not pay the pecuniary fine which to a rich man was the merest trifle.

But I felt ashamed of having so unworthily suspected Grace of a secret understanding with the young conscript. On the contrary, there was a timid glance in her tearful eyes, a trembling in her clear voice, when she addressed me personally or spoke of my prospects, that seemed to betray more than common interest in my fate and welfare. I do not think I am vain, but my fellows, but no other impression could be derived from Grace's manner.

Grace had, however, a favor to beg of me, as a friend.

Reuben Dart could not buy his discharge, but he might put in a claim to exemption. He was the only support of a bedridden parent, the real head of the family. He was delicate of constitution, and not fit for the rough work of campaigning. And he had some time before been hurt in the left wrist by some slip of an ax—a slight cut, but the arm was often stiff and painful.

A memorial setting forth all this had been drawn up by their kind friend, good Dr. Marsh. He lived in that very street, ten doors off, and would I be so generous and obliging as to sign that document, attesting Reuben's merits, his father's helpless state, the injury to his wrist, (I had seen the scar when we played loo), and the other facts? Would I do that favor to the Darts and their friends the Pograns? There were plenty of native witnesses, but an Englishman's testimony would have much weight with the Federal authorities.

It is hard to refuse when a good and pretty girl is the petitioner, and in a surprisingly short time I found myself in Dr. Marsh's parlor, while the doctor—a tall, bald-headed man, with twinkling eyes and dirty wristbands—was hunting in a drawer for the "memorial," and Grace was sitting pen and ink before me, chattering all the while in her lively, yet earnest way.

At last Doctor Marsh found the official document, handsomely engrossed on paper topped over by the eagle of the United States of America, and proceeded smilingly to ask me a question or two.

"I was English, and a seafaring gentleman?"

Just so.

Twenty-four or five, if he might guess?

Twenty-six, dear me!

Five feet ten inches?—Dr. Marsh would bet a dozen of Catawba that I was not under the height he had named. Ah! trust an old doctor to guess.

And what a chest! Few Yankees measured so much in girth under the arm-pits. There was nothing like a Britisher for substance and power, after all.

Grace smiled, and whispered to me that the good doctor was something of a character.

Twang! twang! went the horn of the coach, and a grinning negro popped his head in at the open window to say:

"Massa will be left behind unless he pull foot tarnation quick."

Hastily I signed the memorial; hastily, but fondly, I pressed Grace's hand, and the gentle pressure was returned. Thirty seconds more and the coach was bumping over the bad pavement, and I was one of the passengers.

I had left New London without speaking my mind, but then my absence was only temporary. I had no intention of spending my life in the unambitious task of navigating the Connecticut River. So soon as the "Swiftsure" should come into Boston Harbor from California, Dawkins was to summon me. And I intended to take New London in my way, and to ask Grace to plight her troth in exchange for mine.

In the interim I buckled heartily to my new duties, took charge of the canal boat—a queer, deeply laden scow, gaudy with paint, and manned by a rough lad from Vermont, two negroes, a lean, muscular Marylander, and a deserter from one of the British regiments in Canada.

There was not one sailor among the lot, but the work required was rather that of a porter or carrier than of a mariner, and after a little practice I got into the routine of river voyaging. My crew were rather too fond of shirking work, and a good deal too partial to liquor, but I contrived to keep them in tolerable order; and the owner declared that the trips had never been more punctually made, nor the cargoes better delivered.

About three weeks passed away, and I began to wonder at receiving no answer to a letter I had addressed to Grace, when my doubts were pretty effectually solved.

We were off Hartford, with the quay only a plank's length from our gunwale, and I was still asleep in the neat little cabin that formed the exclusive domain of the canal boat's captain, when a violent tramping on deck, accompanied by a roar of many voices, aroused me.

What could have happened? I knew that my men would not have begun loading cargo until I should myself call them from their lair in the fore-castle. Was the scow on fire?

I sprang out of bed, and hurriedly flung on my clothes, but before I could open the little painted door of my cabin, it was dashed in by a couple of blows such as only the butt-end of a musket can inflict, and a sergeant, followed by two soldiers, rushed in, and presenting the point of his drawn sword to my throat, bade me, in broken English—

"Surrender, and be hanged to me, for a rascal deserter!"

"A deserter! I a deserter! From whom or what?" cried I, rubbing my eyes to make sure that I was awake.

But the German non-commissioned officer deigned no further explanation than was comprised in an unflattering allusion to "lying schelus," and bade his men "bring me along," since Colonel Schurtz would be impatient. And without giving me time to remonstrate or resist, I was seized, ironed, and dragged first on deck and then ashore, with a bayonet on either flank, to urge my progress should I prove recalcitrant.

Early as it was, a crowd of sleepshod women and rough men had gathered to gaze at the "deserter," and the boys of Hartford hooted me unmercifully as I progressed toward the Colonel's quarters.

I was soon ushered into the presence of Col. Schurtz, a grizzly warrior, who was already smoking his meerschaum over a cup of strong black coffee, laced with whisky, and who wore a greasy red cap with a full blue tassel, and was in shirt sleeves, jolling on a sofa covered with pale blue silk. The room had been daintily furnished in the French taste, no doubt as a lady's dressing-room, the owner being probably absent in Europe or the South, but its finery was sadly the worse for the slovenly habits of the present tenant.

Colonel Schurtz spoke very little English, but he had in his vocabulary a few choice terms of abuse, which he showered upon me pell-mell with some strong expressions of High Dutch; the gist of the whole being that I was a deserter from the army of the United States—that my whereabouts under the telegraph, that I was to be sent under escort to the headquarters of my regiment, and that I was a "blasted rascal," who merited the schlagel and the strappado for the trouble I gave.

In vain I pleaded that there was some gross mistake. I was neither believed nor listened to. I was merely asked if my name was Martin, and if I had not lately been at New London. And on my replying in the affirmative, the military judge merely puffed out an extra volume of smoke, and growled out—

"Fort! away! Sergeant, take away to yellow all at once."

And in less than a minute I found myself making progress through the streets, chained, guarded by two files of soldiers, and the object of the pity, abhorrence, or derision of the numerous spectators. The women usually showed some compassion, but the children jeered me with the thoughtlessness of their age, and several of the men abused me for a skulking Britisher. Among these last was my late employer, who shook his fist in my face, and cursed me as a "madder-dyed, double-faced villain." The word "traitor" assailed me on all sides, and I really felt like one who passes through the hideous phantasmagoria of a nightmare. What, in the name of common sense, did all this mean?

I was glad to be clear of Hartford, but the long, hot, and dusty march was painful and distressing. My escort, however, did not willfully maltreat me. On the contrary, they good-naturedly slapped me on the shoulder, offered me some biscuit and a drink from a canteen, and did not refuse to allow me at my own expense to hire a light wagon, in which we all took our places, and which would at least serve to abridge the weary journey to New London, since that was the goal of this enforced pilgrimage. The one thing the Germans could not or would not tell me was, why or how I was classed as a "deserter." They evidently regarded me as a sly fellow, shook their heads, and refused to discuss the point.

A mile or two out of New London we met a sergeant and four men of the American Zouaves, and to their custody I was committed by my German captors. A few hasty words of greeting, a friendly passing round of a black bottle of the national nectar, and then the Germans turned back; while the party of Wilke's regiment, who had been spared a long tramp to the original place of meeting, half way to Hartford, faced about to return to the town, with myself in the midst of them.

Again I pressed my question as to my offence, sure as I was that I was a mere scapegoat, the victim of a mistaken identity. But the sergeant merely turned his head, and bade me "step out," on pain of being pricked into activity with a bayonet.

"Bilking, scampish rowdies you deserters are," said he, in a tone of disgust. "Bat of all the loafing sneaks among you, Britisher, are the worst. You've had your cash, and spent it. We've got you, and we'll keep you, or my name ain't Caleb."

I said no more. Either I must be mad, or the military and citizens of Hartford and New England must be fit candidates for Bedlam. I resolved to waste no more words, but to wait until I reached the town, where I had no doubt of being immediately released.

But what was my horror, in passing through the streets of New London, to see a crowd, as large as the one which attended my ignominious progress, gathered about the door of the principal church, and in the centre of that crowd, Grace Pogran!

Grace—but how changed from the tearful girl who had followed me to the coach office on the day of my departure! The widow's daughter, radiant but demure, in the prettiest of white bonnets, white shawl, white gown, was leaning on the arm of Reuben Dart, whose habitments were all suspiciously new, and of a fashionable cut. There were carriages in waiting; and there were friends of both sexes, among whom I recognized Mrs. Pogran and Mrs. Dart; there was a general medley of white roses, riband favors, of holiday clothes and faces, giggling girls, men half smiling, half sheepish—all the adjuncts of a wedding.

A wedding! My eyes grew dim for a moment, and I leaned heavily on the nearest soldier for support. The odious clash of bells, as they struck up a joy-peal, saluted the bridal party, and served to force the hateful truth upon me. At the same instant, and as Reuben extended his arm to hand Grace into the carriage, the bride looked up, recognized the face of the manacled prisoner close by, and flushed scarlet, while her eyes were lowered as if they were ashamed to meet mine. It was but for an instant, and in the next she glanced indifferently at me as at a stranger, and was handed, all smiles and blushes, into the vehicle in waiting.

As for Reuben, he did not see me at all, or if he did, he kept his countenance well. The carriages drove off, followed by a cheer from the crowd, and my escort moved on again, while I mechanically tramped with them along the streets, stupefied and dull of brain, like one who has received a crushing blow.

At the marshal's office I recovered my wits sufficiently to demand by what right I was thus kidnapped, and on what grounds I was treated as a deserter. But here a new surprise awaited me.

I was curtly informed that on the twenty-first day of the previous month, I, John Martin, mariner, age twenty-seven, height five feet ten, had been accepted as a substitute for the drafted conscript, Reuben Dart. I had passed the medical inspection of a qualified surgeon, Dr. Marsh, whose certificate was appended to the register in my case. And I was briefly informed that, having no doubt spent or gambled away the money I had received from Reuben Dart for serving in his stead, I had concealed myself at Hartford, in hopes of escaping the legal consequences of my agreement, on which account I was reckoned as a deserter, and should be punished by extra drill, with ball and chain, and then handed over to my regiment—Wilke's Zouaves.

"I signed no such paper," said I, getting indignant.

But the marshal spread out before my eyes a paper, topped by the American eagle, and pointed to my signature at the bottom. It was the document I had set my name to, the "memorial" that was to procure exemption from military service for Grace's interesting young friend, and which, in the hurry of starting, I had taken on trust. But to my horror I found it to be a solemn agreement, whereby I became the substitute for the original conscript, and bound myself to do duty as a soldier in the armies of the Federal Government.

In vain I protested that my signature had been obtained by fraud and collusion on the part of Dr. Marsh and the cruel little traitors, Grace Pogran. I was disbelieved, and the marshal merely directed my removal to that part of the jail which was devoted to military offenders.

The fortnight which followed was wretched enough, but I was allowed to communicate with my friends, and the exertions of Captain Dawkins, backed by the British Consul at Boston, finally procured my release. Had I not been a subject of the Queen of England, I do not think that the authorities, greedy as they were for recruits, would so easily have parted with their prize.

"A smart trick" said the old captain, as he chuckled in spite of his native honesty and good-nature, over this new proof of the adroitness of his countrymen—"A smart trick, but a shabby one, I admit. I've seen the girl, and I've seen her husband, and the rest of 'em; and they laugh some over the matter, they do; but they can't deny you were unfairly dealt with. You see, Grace and young Dart were engaged to be married, and all the cash both families could scrape up had gone to buy Reuben a partnership in his master's business. They could not pay the three hundred dollars without mortgaging Grace's house, which didn't suit, so Ma'm Pogran took a substitute on cheaper terms, d'ye see?"

"Yes, I see," I answered, wincing, for my eyes were now pretty well opened. But the old skipper proved a true friend, for, thanks to him, I got the desired berth on board the California clipper, of which I am first officer, with every prospect of one day commanding a ship of my own.

The Alabama Claims are now up again for adjustment, and the British Government has expressed itself desirous of an arbitration. Among the claims persistently pressed, are those of the ever-present and active J. C. Ayer & Co., for the value of shipments of Cherry Pectoral, Sarsaparilla, Ague Cure, and Pills, in transit for Oregon, Vancouver's Island, and Russian America, destroyed on the "Anna Schmidt," off the coast of South America. So universal is the use of their remedies, that they are afloat on almost every sea; and this firm is frequently caught between the upper and nether millstones of contending nations. But they are known to stand up for their rights, and to get them.—Republican, Washington.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

GERMANY.—BERLIN.—A circular, signed by four delegates of an assembly of Israelites, has been sent round to various journals, containing a formal protest against the resolution taken by the administration to appoint Dr. Geiger as Ecclesiastical Chief of the old synagogue at Berlin. The circular states that it had been agreed on that this synagogue should remain at the disposal of the Orthodox party, and that no innovation should be introduced therein; Dr. Geiger's election is contrary to the spirit of this convention; and those that have signed the same protest, and apparently with reason, against the violence intended to be done to them in forcing them to hear a rabbi of whose religious opinions they do not approve.—J. C.

FRANCE.—A petition presented by the editor of the Univers Israélite came up for discussion in one of the sittings of the French Senate, last week. The object of the petition was that the Jewish communities should be allowed to appoint their rabbis by direct election. While due credit was given to the petitioner for the moderate tone and skill with which he produced the petition, the report, nevertheless recommended to pass to the order of the day, and this conclusion of the report was ultimately adopted by the Senate.

SWITZERLAND.—According to a telegram in the Band, the commercial treaty between the Swiss Government and Russia has met with obstacles; it appears that the Russian Government refuses to acknowledge the full reciprocity for the adherents of the various religious confessions, in other words the commercial treaty failed on account of the Jews.

DEATH OF MOSCHELLES, THE COMPOSER.

From Leipzig we receive intelligence of the death of the well-known composer Ignaz Moschelles, which occurred on the 10th ult. He was born in May, 1794, at Prague (of which city his father was a well-to-do merchant), and began to show his love and talent for music so very decidedly that his father had him taught the pianoforte at the early age of ten years. After appearing as an infant prodigy for several years in his native city, Moschelles went to Vienna in 1808, where Albrechtsberger became his master, and Salieri, the conductor of the Imperial Opera, his friend and adviser. It was during this period that he made the acquaintance of Beethoven, then in the zenith of his fame, and under his direction he published in 1814 the first selection from Fido for the pianoforte. Clementi, who may be said to have been the first eminent pianist, also took a strong liking for the youth, and his influence told not a little on the musical style of Moschelles, who about the year 1820 gave a series of concerts in Germany, Holland, France and England, and then settled down for a longer period in London in 1826, being appointed to a professorship at the Academy of Music. He was a wonderful improvisator, and one of his grandest efforts is said to have been on the occasion of the last concert given by Karl Maria von Weber, in May, 1826, he then being in his 32d year. It was mainly through his exertions that the Philharmonic Society voted a liberal donation to Beethoven, who, however, died almost before the much-needed assistance reached him, and whose last dictated letter (March, 1825), was one of thanks to Moschelles. After having assumed the direction of the Philharmonic Concerts, a post which he held for fifteen years, Moschelles yielded to the oft-repeated solicitations of his friend Mendelssohn, and together with him undertook the leadership of the then newly-instituted Conservatoire at Leipzig. This was in 1846, and he held the post until his death, which occurred within two months of his 76th year.

PARIS.—Considerable excitement was caused at the Paris Bourse by the report that several millions had been robbed from the banking house of Baron Rothschild. It is, however, impossible to define the exact amount before an inventory is taken, and in so large a business such a task is a matter of time; all, therefore, that can be relied upon is the fact that a theft has been committed. The culprit is a M. C. Tassius, a bachelor, aged fifty, and who has for twenty years been employed in the firm of Rothschild. He lived alone and in a most frugal manner; regular in his business, he was respected by all, and an especial favorite among the superiors. About eight months ago he was attacked by a partial paralysis, and obliged for a time to leave his post. The clerk who replaced Tassius did not perceive any flaw in books, and no one had the slightest suspicion that anything was wrong in the accounts. Last Friday, however, Tassius, who had resumed his work, left the office under the pretext that he was unwell, and indeed some of his companions assisted him down stairs. Next morning, finding that he had not arrived at the office, inquiries were made at his home, when it was discovered that Tassius had disappeared. At first, this caused much alarm. A search was immediately instituted, but a day after his flight Tassius quietly presented himself to the prefecture of police, and acknowledged that since the year 1865 he had been in the habit of pilfering his employers. He always succeeded, however, in "cooking" the accounts so as to escape discovery.

APPEARANCES.

Who is there in all the wide world that would disregard appearances? Who is there that would be careless of the opinion of his neighbors?

We hope, no one. For it is just this regard for appearances which is the great mainstay of civilization. "What will people think of it?" is a question which, perhaps, more frequently keeps us from going astray, than conscience or law. We all like to stand well in the opinion of our neighbors; we all like to appear good, worthy, respectable people; and perhaps this feeling is one of the most powerful incentives to our exertions in life.

We will not inquire whether this is quite as it should be. We only know that this regard for appearances exists, and that, on the whole, it exercises a very beneficial influence upon society.

But, like all good things, it is bad when in excess; and it is of this excessive love of appearances—the regard for false appearances—that we are about to treat.

The text which gave rise to this article, (Eccl. vi. 8, 9, 10,) is a wonderful piece of wisdom. The wise King looks down from the lofty eminence of royalty upon the home and the heart of the poor man, enters into his feelings, fathoms his ambition, and bids him cease a rivalry in which he can never triumph. He asks of what use is it to the sensible poor man to attempt to rival those who fill a higher position in life. He bids him rather occupy himself with thoughts of those things which are within his grasp, than long for the appearance of a position which he can scarcely hope to attain; and he reminds him that, if, after all, his hopes be realized—if he become a great man, the world will not forget his humble origin, and it will be vain to seek to disguise it. "What he originally was, that will his name ever be."

These wonderful words are not mere words of worldly wisdom. They seek to show what rivalry is unworthy of an intelligent man—what competition is a vain and demoralizing struggle. They teach a lesson to all alike—to the beggar who imitates the prosperous workman, the trader who apes the rich gentleman, the nobleman who tries to rival the king; to all, in fact, who seek to clothe themselves in false appearances for the sake of the opinion of the world.

There are people who love truth, who would not upon any account utter a falsehood, and whose life is, nevertheless, one huge lie. To appear to be what they are not, to seem to their neighbors richer, greater, more clever than they really are, is the aim and object of their life. They dress with a grandeur they can ill afford; they spend their time in adorning their persons with finery which will become their station; they try to persuade themselves and others that they are people of fashion and refinement; they speak of work disdainfully, and of the labor by which they live as beneath their consideration. They would like to be grand people, no doubt, but that is immaterial, so long as they can appear grand people. Now, is not the life of all such people one enormous lie?

"But why be so hard upon poor people?" we think we hear some foolish, good-natured person ask. "I am sure they have few pleasures enough; and, after all, there is something praiseworthy in wishing to present a respectable appearance. Surely you would not always keep the poor in their low position!"

Now, let us say, once for all, that our remarks, generally, do not apply solely to the poor. There is no station in life in which the sin of false appearances does not exist. The work-girl, perhaps, buys gaudy ribbons which she cannot afford; and the duchess, perhaps, buys diamonds which she cannot pay for—both alike for false appearances.

But we would especially call attention to the assertion that to "present an appearance" is one of the pleasures of the poor. This is a great mistake. Far from being a pleasure, it must be a terrible penalty. You may see this by the appearance of these "appearances." People who strive to seem what they are not, look as uncomfortable as if they were wearing masks. And, indeed, they are wearing masks. They are disguising themselves so as to appear different from what they really are, and it is a truly anxious task to maintain such a disguise.

Then consider how costly is this troublesome mask. What necessities have to be denied in order to purchase all the superfluities! What precious hours have to be sacrificed, and what thought and labor have to be bestowed upon the finery which glitters without adorning! For, after all, it is a miserable failure. The disguise is not half so dignified as the reality. The mask does not fit. The reality would look a thousand times more dignified and more graceful. The work-girl, clad in plain and homely dress, of sober tint, not looking grand, but merely neat and tidy, appears arrayed in true and perfect dignity. If nature gave her beauty, she needs no gaudy trappings to show it off; and if nature was not lavish of her gifts, the deficiency is best concealed by a plain and simple garb.

Pray do not think that the object of these remarks is to impress you with an utter disregard of dress. A proper regard for personal appearance is one of the best indications of self-respect; and self-respect, well fostered, will guard from many a false step. It is very praiseworthy to keep up a respectable appearance; but that is not a respectable appearance which demands for its maintenance a sacrifice of duty, and, perhaps, of principle. When you wear a fine dress, you should be able to tell the world, whose admiration you silently claim, how you came by it; you should be able to tell its whole history; with what earnings you purchased it; how all other claims upon your purse had been previously satisfied; how all other duties had been first fulfilled, and all necessities first supplied; and, if you can tell this history truthfully, and without a blush, your dress will well become you.

But it is not in dress alone that the love of false appearances manifests itself. There is a growing tendency among young folks to talk alightingly of the means whereby they earn a livelihood, as if it were a matter of very trivial importance, for which they care little or perhaps nothing, and of which they are wholly independent. They evidently think it a very vulgar thing to earn their living by some pursuit, perhaps not very refining in its nature.

In olden times it was very different. Working men then used to belong to guilds or clubs of various handicrafts, and the head of the guild was the man who was best at his work, most skillful at his craft. When these clubs met it was not to talk of trivial nonsense, in which all mention of their trade was sedulously avoided, but their work was an endless theme of conversation. Men were proud of their labor in those days; and their labor was dignified by the longing of each workman to excel, and by the respect which each paid to his craft. Their work was a thing to be loved, not to be talked of disdainfully, or regarded as a vulgar incident of life.

It may appear to you immaterial whether you speak contemptuously of your trade or not. But such conversation exercises a wonderful influence upon the manner in which you do your work. Now-a-days, many mix in society with those of a class far above them, and so it often happens that to keep up appearance a man may wish to conceal his own humble station in the presence of another, superior in position. Hence, probably, the origin of that evil which makes men ashamed rather than proud of their work.

And this leads us to consider another evil resulting from the love of false appearances. There is such a longing to mix in a sphere higher than your own. No matter at what sacrifice, this longing must be satisfied; and yet every day's experience shows what sorrows and heart-burnings are the result.

Such a maintenance of false position is always most costly, and invariably attended with some loss of self-respect. And, in the end, it proves a miserable failure. He who aspires to this social eminence suddenly finds that the world does not forget his humble origin, but "What he originally was, that will his name be." It is useless to wear the costly mask. An accidental glance or an inadvertent word may betray the disguise.

We read in the Bible, (2 Kings, iv. 13,) that when Elisha, grateful to the Shunammite woman for all her kindness, offered to introduce her to the notice of the royal court, he received from her the modest reply: "I dwell among my own people." What a quiet dignity lies in those few words! The Shunammite, though "a great woman," had a loftier ambition than to shine in a sphere higher than her own. For her it was enough to dwell among her own people, enjoying the respect of her neighbors, and devoting her superfluities to the necessities of the wayfarer. What were the glories of a court to her? In her own home she was queen; among her own people she found her pleasure and delight.

Why does not every man and every woman among us emulate the example of the good Shunammite? To live among our own people is good for us as individuals and as a nation. Every one has a position in his own sphere, and if he thrust himself into a higher one, he will find there no rest for the sole of his foot. He will find himself in a false position, difficult to be maintained, ever liable to be lost. In his own sphere, among his own people, he needs no disguise, no false appearances. His position is a natural one; he is comfortable and safe in it.

And what if you are called old-fashioned people for keeping quietly in your old beaten paths, not striving to be great folks, and not wishing to seem what you are not? What matters it if the giddy throng, who love to mix in the gay sphere far above their own or yours, laugh at you from their lofty eminence? Look but a little time, and you will see them dance like mad butterflies around the brilliant flame, till the fire burns them and they fall.

If you dwell among your own people, and seek happiness in your own home, amid those whom you best love, and who love you best, you will there find happiness. Grasp that happiness while it is within your reach, for "better is that which the eyes behold than that which the soul longeth after."

Heed not the scorn of those who are ashamed of their true position, and who shame it by their false position. And when you see them, clad in false appearances, deriding your quiet garb and homely habits, you may answer with a pride and dignity which they, with all their grandeur, cannot even assume,—"I dwell among my own people."—D. SOME INTERESTING HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

We published last week the copy of an address, presented in 1790 by the Hebrew congregations in the cities of Philadelphia, New York, Charleston and Richmond, to George Washington. We publish today the answer returned by George Washington to the address in question, also the address of the Hebrew congregation in Newport to the President, and the answer thereto. These addresses are but little known, and we deem it, therefore, of interest to reproduce these historical documents. They were taken from a book published at Boston in 1796, entitled, "A Collection of the Speeches of the President of the United States to both Houses of Congress at the opening of every Session, with their Answers, etc."

THE ANSWER.

To the Hebrew Congregations in the Cities of Philadelphia, New York, Charleston and Richmond.

GENTLEMEN! The liberality of sentiment toward each other which marks every political and religious denomination of men in this country, stands unparalleled in the history of nations.

The affection of such a people, is a treasure beyond the reach of calculation; and the repeated proofs which my fellow-citizens have given of their attachment to me and approbation of my doings, form the purest sources of my felicity. The affectionate expressions of your address again excite my gratitude, and receive my warmest acknowledgments.

The power and goodness of the events of our late glorious revolution; and his kind interposition in our behalf, has been no less visible in the establishment of our present equal government, in war he directed the sword; and in peace he has ruled our councils. My agency in both has been guided by the best intentions, and a sense of duty which I owe my country. And as my exertions have hitherto been amply rewarded by the approbation of my fellow-citizens, I shall endeavor to deserve a continuance of it by my future conduct.

May the same temporal and eternal blessings which you implore for me, rest upon your congregations.

ADDRESS

Of the Hebrew Congregation in Newport, Rhode Island, to the President of the United States of America.

Sir! Permit the children of the stock of Abraham to approach you with the most cordial affection and esteem for your person and merit, and to join with our fellow-citizens in welcoming you to Newport.

With pleasure we reflect on these days—those days of difficulty and danger, when the God of Israel, who delivered David from the peril of the sword, shielded your head in the day of battle; and we rejoice to think that the same Spirit who rested on the bosom of the greatly beloved Daniel, enabling him to preside over the provinces of the Babylonian empire, rests, and ever will rest, upon you, enabling you to discharge the arduous duties of Chief Magistrate in these States.

Deprived as we heretofore have been of the invaluable rights of free citizens, we now (with a deep sense of gratitude to the Almighty Disposer of all events) behold a government erected by the Majesty of the People—a government, which to bigotry gives no sanction—to persecution no assistance; but generously affording to all, liberty of conscience, and immunities of citizenship: deeming every one, of whatever nation, tongue or language, equal parts of the great governmental machine. This so ample and extensive Federal Union, whose base is philanthropy, mutual confidence, and public virtue, we cannot but acknowledge to be the work of the Great God, who ruleth in the armies of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth, doing whatsoever seemeth to Him good.

For all the blessings of civil and religious liberty, which we can enjoy under an equal and benign administration, we desire to send up our thanks to the Ancient of Days, the Great Preserver of men, beseeching Him that the Angel who conducted our forefathers through the wilderness into the promised land, may graciously conduct you through all the difficulties and dangers of this mortal life. And when like Joshua, full of days and full of honors, you are gathered to your fathers, may you be admitted into the heavenly paradise, to partake of the water of life, and the tree of immortality.

Done and Signed by order of the Hebrew Congregation, in Newport, Rhode Island.

Moses Seixas, Warden.

Newport, August 17, 1790.

THE ANSWER.

To the Hebrew Congregation in Newport, Rhode Island.

GENTLEMEN! While I receive with much satisfaction your address, replete with expressions of affection and esteem, I rejoice in the opportunity of assuring you, that I shall always retain a grateful remembrance of the cordial welcome I experienced in my visit to Newport, come I experienced in my visit to Newport, from all classes of citizens. The reflection on the days of difficulty and danger which are past, is rendered the more sweet from a consciousness that they are succeeded by days of uncommon prosperity and security.

If we have wisdom to make the best use of the advantages with which we are now favored, we cannot fail, under the just administration of a good government, to become a great and a happy people.

The citizens of the United States of America have a right to applaud themselves for having given to mankind examples of an enlarged and liberal policy; a policy worthy of imitation. All possess a like liberty of conscience, and immunities of citizenship. It is now no more that toleration is spoken of, as if it was the indulgence of one class of people that another enjoyed the exercise of their inherent natural rights. For happily the government of the United States, which gives to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance, requires only that they who live under its protection should demean themselves as good citizens, in giving it on all occasions their effectual support.

It would be inconsistent with the frankness of my character, not to avow that I am pleased with your favorable opinion of my administration, and fervent wishes for my felicity. May the children of the stock of Abraham, who dwell in this land, continue to merit and enjoy the good will of the other inhabitants—while every one shall sit in safety under his own vine and fig-tree, and there shall be none to make him afraid.

May the Father of all Mercies scatter light and not darkness in our paths, and make us all in our several vocations useful here, and in His own due time and way everlastingly happy.

G. WASHINGTON

VIRGINIA CITY, NEV.—At a meeting of Nevada Lodge, I. O. B. B., held in this city, the Grand Nassi-Ab of the Order, Louis Kaplan, Esq., of San Francisco, delivered an address upon "Charity and Education," and made a stirring appeal to the members of the I. O. B. B. to assist all institutions which have for their object the elevation of the minor and alleviation of suffering. He plead in an able manner for assistance for the B. B. Orphan Asylum and Home to be erected in San Francisco, under the auspices of the Order—free, however, to all classes who may seek shelter therein. He was followed by Messrs. Schwartz and Saalburg, who came with him on the same mission. After the conclusion of the speech the members, with their usual liberality, manifested on so many occasions, appropriated the sum of $2,000 toward the building of the institution for which these gentlemen so earnestly solicited aid. Virginia may well feel proud of the action of Nevada Lodge.

We hear from Los Angeles that the new lodge of the A. J. O. K. S. B. was opened on 3d inst. with appropriate ceremonies, conducted by Grand Saar Baum, of this city.

MESSES. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON AND HODGE have just sold a copy of the first folio edition of the works of Shakespeare, with the verses inlaid, and the margins of the title supplied, for $360, and an unusually fine copy of the third edition for $200, which latter sum is more than double the amount it has ever brought before.

MR. DEUTSCH, the famous Oriental scholar, is said to be recovering from his recent indisposition.

A NOBLE DEED.—The Chevre-Beth-Abraham, of this city, at a meeting held on Sunday last, donated the sum of $200 to the Jewish Orphan and Home Asylum Fund. The Chevre contains only forty members, and they gave one-third of their whole fund, which does not exceed $600, for the above-named purpose. This noble action deserves much praise, and we trust that all Societies will follow this example.

ENTERTAINMENT.—Mr. B. F. Peixotto has associated with him in the Fire and Life Insurance business Berthold Greenebaum, late of Greenebaum Brothers, and formerly with Wm. Meyer & Co., an old Californian, and well known to the business men of the Pacific. This is a strong team, and must prove one of the most popular. Mr. Peixotto will give his special attention to the practice of law.

The meeting at Platt's Hall, Monday evening last, called by Mr. Mooney for the purpose of establishing a Celtic Insurance Company, was well attended. Mr. Mooney addressed some eloquent remarks to those assembled, and $20,000 was subscribed towards the establishment of the new Company.

MR. JOHN ALLEN, the well-known musician, was shot in the back by Frank Medina, also a musician, on Wednesday afternoon. Owing to the thick clothing worn by Mr. Allen, the wound he received was but slight.

The Fire-Fly Social and Dramatic Club, a recently organized Jewish society, will give their first entertainment and ball, on Friday evening, May 6th, at Turaveria Hall. Tom Taylor's drama "The Ticket of Leave Man," will be presented.

THE fifth annual picnic of the B'nai B'rith will take place on Sunday, May 29th, inst., at Schutzen Park, Alameda. The Committee of Arrangements have left nothing undone to make this the best picnic of the season.

MASONIC MIRROR.—The May number of this valuable Monthly has been received. The same contains, as usual, very excellent matter.

SACRAMENTO.—Etham Lodge I. O. B. B. has given $600 to the Jewish Orphan and Home Asylum Fund.

A. J. O. K. S. B.—The annual picnic of this Society will come off on Sunday, June 12th, at City Gardens.

The Independent Social Club will give their first ball on Wednesday, May 18th, at Mozart Hall.

Die Benefizvorstellung für Herrn von Soyom am vergangenen Sonntag, hatte das Haus leider nicht so gefüllt, wie es die Wahl des Stückes und das Ansehen des Benefizianten, der sich durch sein vortreffliches Spiel so viel Freunde hier erworben, wohl erwarten ließ. Die Schuld hiervon war jedoch hauptsächlich, daß gerade auf diesen Sonntag, als den ersten Mai, sehr viele Feste zusammenkamen, welche den größten Theil unseres deutschen Publikums außerhalb der Stadtgrenzen gefesselt halten. — Samlet, Shakespeares Meisterwerk, hatte Herr Soyom zu seiner Benefiz-Vorstellung gewählt, und war die Aufgabe, die derselbe sich dadurch stellte, uns diesen schwierigen aller Charaktere vorzuführen, gewiß keine kleine zu nennen. Aber wir müssen gestehen, Herr Soyom hat seine Aufgabe glänzend gelöst; sein Spiel fern von jeder Effekthaserei und doch die einzelnen Nuancirungen dieser Rolle so klar zu erkennen geben, befandete nicht allein ein klares Verständniß, sondern zeugte auch von einem tiefen Studium. Ungefühlt und voller Wahrheit führte uns Herr Soyom den Hamlet nicht als das Phantastengestalt eines Dichters vor Augen, sondern so, wie wir ihn uns noch jetzt als in der realen Wirklichkeit existierend denken können. Wiederholter Beifall und Hervorruf zeigten dem Künstler, daß das Publikum diese seine Leistung wohl zu würdigen verstand. In gleicher Weise wie Herr Soyom, trug auch Herr Scherer dazu bei, das Stück seines großen Dichters würdig in Scene geben zu lassen. Sein Spiel als König Claudius war in jeder Beziehung ausgezeichnet, und zeigte uns das Bild des von Gewissensbissen über seine Bluttat gequälten Königs mit wahrhaft ergreifender Treue. Die Rolle der Ophelia hatte Frä. Fellmann übernommen, doch entsprach die junge Dame, wie wir selber gesehen mußten, unsern Erwartungen durchaus nicht. Ihr Spiel war viel zu kalt, und besonders in der Wahnsinnscene, die doch der Künstlerin genug Gelegenheit bot, ihr Talent zur Geltung zu bringen, viel zu matt und farblos, um irgend welchen Effect zu erzielen. Herr Grant als Oberkammerherr Polonius und nachher als Todengräber, erwarb sich besonders durch seine vortreffliche Durchführung der letzteren Rolle allgemeinen Beifall. Hervorzuheben von den Uebrigen sind noch Herr Kiemer als Carries und Herr Krefschmann als Geist, die ihren zwar nur kleinen Rollen nach besten Kräften gerecht wurden.

Am nächsten Sonntag kommt die alte, und durch ihren sprudelnden Witz und Humor doch immer neu bleibende Posse „Die Maschinisten“ von Weibrauch, zur Aufführung; wir wollen hoffen, daß unser Publikum sein Verfallnis von letztemal nachholen und recht zahlreich in dem Tempel der Kunst erscheinen werde.

Die Fest des San Francisco Turnvereins. — Am Sonntag, den 1. und Montag den 2. Mai, wurde hier in San Francisco ein Fest gefeiert, das bei seiner regelmäßigen jährlichen Wiederkehr wohl von allen Deutschen mit Freuden begrüßt wird, nämlich das Fest des San Francisco Turnvereins. Und selten wohl ist es einem Verein gelungen, eine von ihm veranstaltete Feier zu einem so allgemeinen Volksfeste zu machen, wie es mit dieser der Fall war. Schon Sonntag Vormittag um 10 Uhr begab sich der imposante Zug, mit wehenden Fahnen und mit Blumen bekränzt, begleitet von Hunderten, die ihre Freude an den frammen Weisflächen hatten, von der Turnhalle aus nach den City Gardens, wo der Verein alles gethan hatte, Groß und Klein, Alt und Jung zu erheitern und zu erfreuen. Während im oberen Theile des Gartens ein außerordentliches Orchester die schönsten Opernmelodien erklingen ließ, versammelte in dem unteren Theile schöne Tanzmusik die Tanzlustigen; und Turner und Jünglinge zeigten am Red und am Barren ihre Kraft und Gewandtheit. Spiele für die Jugend waren überall arrangirt worden, und hübsche Preise wurden den Siegern in denselben zu Theil. So wurde denn getanzt, musiziert, geturnt und gespielt bis die Sonne sank, und die Turner unter frischer Begleitung nach Hause zogen. Der zweite Tag brachte dieselben Vergnügungen, in eben so vollendeter Weise, und ein glänzender Ball beschloß das Fest, das allen seinen Theilnehmern gewiß noch lange im Gedächtnisse bleiben wird.

Schützenfest des S. F. Schützenvereins. — Am Sonntag, den 8. und Montag, den 9. Mai, feiert der San Francisco Schützenverein sein zwölftes Schützenfest in dem schönen Schützenpark zu Alameda. Der Verein hat von seiner Seite alles gethan, um das Fest zu einem recht großartigen zu machen. Bogel-, Scheiben- und Flatterschießen, sowie auch Vogelschießen für Damen, zu welchem die kostbaren Preise ausgesetzt sind. Die schöne Musik und die vielen anderen Vergnügungen werden gewiß nicht verfehlen, ein recht zahlreiches Publikum herbeizuziehen.

Deutsche Oper. — Wie uns von befreundeter Seite mitgetheilt wird, werden wir in kurzem eine deutsche Operntuppe, die die besten Gesangs-kräfte Amerika's zu ihren Mitgliedern zählt, in unserer Mitte begrüßen können. Daß dieses Unternehmen, im Falle daß es, wie es allen Anschein hat, wirklich ein Gelingen ist, gewiß Erfolg haben wird, brauchen wir wohl nicht erst hinzuzufügen, da der Sinn des hiesigen Publikums und speziell der Deutschen für Musik bekannt genug ist.

U. S. G. — Die Germania Lebens-Versicherungsgesellschaft. — Herr Bernhard Watzel, General-Agent der obigen Gesellschaft, hat das hiesige Geschäftsbüro derselben nach dem geräumigen Lokale, Nord-west-Ecke Montgomery und California Straßen, verlegt. Die „Germania“, die älteste deutsche Lebens-Versicherungsgesellschaft in den Vereinigten Staaten, hat sich einen beweisenden Ruf, besonders an dieser Küste, erworben und steht im Vertrauen der hiesigen Bevölkerung obenan.

Rheumatism, Gout, and Neuralgia Cure!

THIS MEDICINE, SO FAMED FOR ITS

curative power, has been used for many years, and has cured thousands of patients who have suffered for years with the above named diseases. A trial of this wonderful Cure by those suffering from the above named diseases will give them immediate relief by the use of

ONLY ONE BOTTLE.

My Rheumatism, Gout, and Neuralgia Cure has been used for years, always bringing relief to the afflicted

It is harmless as a Medicine, and I am confident will give entire satisfaction.

To those who wish immediate relief I would say do not fail to resort to my remedy.

OFFICE—581 Kearny street, San Francisco.

TESTIMONIAL.

Still another wonderful recovery effected to a reverend gentleman, who is well known in this State, by the use of only two bottles of Dr. S. Girard Smith's ARAMI-

RACULAS:

Dr. S. GIRARD SMITH—Dear Sir:—Having used two bottles of your "Aramiraculas," for the cure of rheumatism, and experienced its wonderful effect, I take pleasure in giving it my hearty commendation. After suffering more than twenty years, from the worst form of rheumatic affections, and having tried the best remedies known to the medical faculty without more than temporary relief, I was not prepared to give much credit to the claims of your medicine. My experience, however, is beyond all expectations. In an incredibly short time my never-ceasing pain was effectually relieved, and my chronic lameness was removed. I most cheerfully commend your great remedy to all rheumatic sufferers. This is the first time that I ever gave the use of my name in favor of any medicine for rheumatism, but I do it now for the sake of sufferers from this terrible disease, and in justice to the merits of your infallible cure.

WE HAVE CONTRACT

General Debility is Nature's Appeal for Help.

Thousands of persons, without any specific ailment, are the victims of languor and lassitude. The unthinking are apt to confound this species of inertia, with laziness; whereas it usually arises from a want of organic energy, for which the subjects of it are no more responsible than the near-sighted are for their defective vision. Such persons, although they may be free from pain, are as truly invalids, and as much in need of medical aid, as if they were tormented with the pangs of acute disease. They require a TONIC and ALTERNATIVE, that will rouse and regulate their torpid organizations. In cases of this kind, HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS produce an immediate and most favorable effect. The debilitated and desponding valetudinarian, who feels as if he were but half alive; who shuns company, and has no relish either for business or pleasure, is metamorphosed, by a brief course of this most potent vegetable invigorant, into quite a different being. The change effected by the BITTERS, in his bodily and mental condition, is a surprise to himself and to his friends. He mopes no longer; the active principle of life, which seemed to have died out of him, is re-awakened, and he feels like a new man. Remembering that debility is not only an affliction itself, but an invitation to disease, no time should be lost in recruiting the broken-down system with this choicest and most potent of all TONICS AND NERVINES.

Dr. J. Regensburger has removed his private residence to 536 Kearny street, corner Sacramento.

Bottled Beer of the best kinds can be had at very liberal rates at the Philadelphia Brewery Depot of Deutsch & Co., 536 Sacramento street.

All kinds of Glass-cutting, Staining, etc., will be done in the best manner at very low rates by Thomas O'Neil, No. 10 Stevenson st., up stairs.

We call the attention of our merchant readers to the card of S. H. Steplar, General Agent for "Wheeler's Patent Cancellor," which will be found in another column of this paper.

All delicacies of the season can be found every hour of the day at Messrs. Ricard & Borden, Market Coffee Saloon and Restaurant, 520 Merchant street.

MILKINERY.—The attention of our lady readers is especially directed to the card in another column of Mrs. Borden, No. 134 Kearny street.

ATTENTION.—If you want a good fitting pair of boots or shoes made to order, at liberal prices, go to Beez & de Longe, No. 315 Bush street. These gentlemen will give to everybody satisfaction, and guarantee for their work.

NEW BELLA UNION THEATRE.—First class minstrel performances, dances, songs, gymnastics, etc., nightly fill this theatre with a delighted audience.

If you are troubled with rheumatism, gout, or neuralgia, use Dr. S. Girard Smith's celebrated "Aramiraculus," and you will be at once relieved.

HOUSEKEEPING.—The many parties now in boarding-houses who intend to set up house-keeping by themselves, will, we are sure be thankful to us when we give them a hint where they can buy furniture, all of the best quality, at astonishing low rates. It is of J. A. Shaber, 707 Market street, near Third, manufacturer and dealer in furniture and bedding; who sells his goods cheaper for cash than any other dealer. Don't fail to call.

SCAMFUL ARE THE WAYS OF QUACKS.—An examination of one of the articles offered to the Ladies for beautifying the Complexion, said examination being prompted by the statement of a lady that, "using it had made her teeth seem loose," disclosed the fact that it contained a large quantity of a mercurial salt which had probably salivated her. There seems no law to reach such scoundrelism; manufactured by quacks of the first water, made to sell by skillful advertising, and the fraud and stupidity of dealers in drugs and perfumery who recommend an article they can make the most profit out of, the ladies are cautioned to use only such articles for the complexion as they may be certain are manufactured by some known expert, like the "Crema de Lis," manufactured by Dickey, Pioneer Apothecary.

You may plant rue, thistles, or dogwood, and when the earth hides them, label the spot roses, violets, and magnolia; but time will show the falsehood, even as it proves the mendacity of those who claim for their worthless nostrums, virtues only to be found in the "Excellent," that famous carminative prepared by Barry & Patten.

WHERE to buy good boots and shoes is an important question. We recommend all in want of boots, shoes, gaiters, etc., of the very best quality, and at lowest rates, the splendid establishment of Messrs. M. Rosenthal & Bro., 310 Kearny street. Don't fail to give them a call.

Dr. J. C. Jessup ist von den östlichen Staaten wieder zurückgekehrt, und kann in seinen alten Räumen, Ecke Sutter und Montgomery Straßen, über Zuder's, consultirt werden. Er ist präparirt, neuen Anforderungen seiner alten sowie etwailigen neuen Kunden, die ihm beehren, zu genügen. Jede Arbeit in dieser Office, die nicht zur Zufriedenheit ausfällt, wird bei vorerstem Ansuchen nochmals befragt. Die Preise sind, um mit denjenigen in den östlichen Staaten zu correspondiren, um 25 pCt. reducirt worden. Befre Rubber Platten, welche Dore oder Untere, zu $25, wobei Zufriedenheit garantirt wird. Die classische Anzahl von Platten, von ihm gemacht, welche jetzt getragen werden, geben eine genügende Garantie seines Erfolges in dieser Branche. Alle sollten bei ihm vorstehen, ehe sie ihre Arbeit anderweitig machen lassen.

Allen Liebhabern einer guten Maßzeit können wir das aus feinste eingerichtete Esperance Restaurant, 647 Commercial Straße, bestens empfehlen. Einzelne Maßzeiten mit Wein oder Cognac nur 50 Cents.

Die beste gratis Abend-Unterhaltung gewährt die "Victoria Halle", S. W. Ecke von Kearny und Sacramento Straßen durch ihre Vorführungen von Sängern und Tänzern. Für gute Getränke ist gleichfalls gesorgt.

Photographien.—Von alten Photographien, die uns die jetzt vor Augen gekommen sind, müssen wir denen, die die Herren Brown & Otto, 26 Dritte Straße, verfertigen, den Preis zuerkennen, da dieselben in jeder Hinsicht auf Beste ausgeführt sind. Trotzdem sind die Preise für dieselben viel niedriger, als sie gewöhnlich gefordert werden.

PROSPECTUS
SAN PASCUAL PLANTATION!

THE TRACT OF LAND SELECTED IS A portion of the San Pascual Ranch, in Los Angeles County, comprising 1,750 Acres, of the finest quality.
A ditch, which forms the northern boundary of the tract—constructed at a cost of $10,000—has also been purchased. This ditch furnishes, in the driest season, sufficient water to irrigate the whole tract. It is proposed to cultivate this land with Oranges, Lemons, Olives, Nuts, Raisin Grapes, etc., and to commence at once. For this purpose, the above-named Company has been formed, with a capital of $200,000—divided into 4,000 shares of $50 each; payments to be made in (and regular) installments, as follows: $10 per share at date of subscription, and $3 each year afterward, till the whole amount is paid. All the money to be used in paying for the land and cultivating the same.

The originators of this enterprise have devoted considerable time and attention to the matter, and in placing it before the public, feel confident of its proving a profitable investment. They also believe the plan of operations, with the easy terms of payments, will commend the enterprise to all.

Further information, By-Laws, etc., will be furnished at the office, 344 Montgomery street.

EDEN DALE COMPANY

Cultivation of Semi-Tropical Fruits, Etc.

THIS COMPANY, WITH THE ABOVE object in view, has purchased a tract of 6,000 acres of land adjoining the celebrated Cocomongo Ranch, together with the water of that Ranch, and it is proposed to enter at once upon its cultivation.

Experience has shown conclusively that associated capital can be profitably employed in this direction; therefore this Company has been formed with a capital of $360,000—divided into 12,000 shares of $30 each. As all the money obtained from the sale of shares is to be used in paying for the land and improving it, a portion of which only is needed now, therefore the shares are to be paid for in easy installments, as follows: $10 per share at the date of subscription; the balance in equal ANNUAL installments thereafter of $4 each. The officers are all well known, and pay for their shares the same as other members do, because they feel confident the enterprise will prove a safe and profitable investment. The books will be opened for subscriptions on MONDAY, April 25th, at the office of the Company, 344 Montgomery street.

The distinctive features of this Company are its SECURITY, SECURITY, NON-FORFEITABLE POLICIES, TRAVELING PRIVILEGES, LOW PREMIUMS.

The man who neglects or refuses to make a certain provision for his family after his death, or a provision for himself when advanced in life, and no longer able to bear its burdens, is considered unwise, if not improbable.

Look at the following facts presented in the "UNITED SECURITY," to those who would secure the Largest Amount of Insurance for the Least Money!

AT THE AGE OF THIRTY:

To Secure $10,000.....ANNUAL PREMIUM.....$185.80
" 5,000....." 92.90
" 3,000....." 55.74
" 1,000....." 18.88
Can be paid Quarterly, or Semi-Annually, if preferred.

AT THE AGE OF FORTY:

To Secure $1,000.....ANNUAL PREMIUM.....ONLY $23.04
" 500....." 11.52
" 300....." 6.90
" 100....." 2.30
Can be paid Quarterly, or Semi-Annually, if desired.

At other ages, from 14 to 60 years, at equally low Cash
Premiums. Females insured at the same Rates as Males.

CHUBB'S ENDORSEMENT.—By which you can insure your child, so that at the age of 18, 21, or 25, from $1,000 to $5,000 or $10,000 can be received; or, in case of previous death, all premiums will be returned! No
